Critical hope reflects the ability to realistically assess one’s environment through a lens of equity and justice while also envisioning the possibility of a better future (Dugan, 2017; Duncan-Andrade, 2009). Join our conversation with Dr. Jeff Duncan-Andrade as we collectively gain the necessary knowledge, awareness, and skills for building the critical connections with one another that will sustain us and our leadership efforts in the face of struggle. This interactive session is for all those who want to challenge themselves and their students to engage in critical thinking, who need courage and a sense of solidarity from knowing they are not alone in this struggle, and who also sense a deep undercurrent of hope in taking one step, and then another, toward that better future.

Jeff Duncan-Andrade, Ph.D., is Professor of Latina/o Studies and Race and Resistance Studies at San Francisco State University. He was a founder of the Roses in Concrete Community School, a community responsive lab school in East Oakland (www.rosesinconcrete.org) and has been a classroom teacher and school leader in East Oakland (CA) for the past 28 years.

Register in advance for this Zoom event at www.dvc.edu/equity-speakers

After registering, you will receive a confirmation email with information about joining the zoom.